Assignments

Week 11, beginning 10/24/2011:

Tuesday, 10/25:

- Hand in any rewrites you've done.
- Over the weekend I asked you to write a paper comparing and contrasting a job you or a friend has with your dream job. Please hand these papers in. I'll get them back to you on Thursday.
- We need to finish reading George Orwell's "Shooting an Elephant," and then I'll probably give you a quiz.
- We'll then consider a previous CME prompt, "The Ways We Lie," by Sephanie Ericsson. In particular you need to create a comparison table, pulling ideas from the prompt, that will allow you to create a Listen-Speak-Learn response.

Homework due Thursday, 10/27:

- 1. Paper: None.
- 2. Reading Assignment: None.
- 3. Journal Assignment: Using our discussion from class, outline your four-paragraph response to Ericsson's prompt.

Thursday, 10/27

- I'll return your essays, which will give us a chance to do some grammar.
- We'll finish our discussion of your CME prompt.

Homework due Tuesday, 11/1

- 1. Reading Assignment: None.
- 2. Journal Assignment: None.
- 3. Writing Assignment: Write your Listen-Speak-Response to Stephanie Ericsson's "The Ways We Lie" and hand it in on Tuesday, 11/1.

"Calvin and Hobbes" by Bill Watterson.

"If elected, I'll institute an amazing crash program that in just 24 hours will trim ugly fat and waste from government and literally turn it into super services for you the American people by utilizing a natural mechanism so powerful that when unleashed against pockets of government flab it melts and transforms them into effective programs that work even as the American people sleep!!"
